

Shitty, White Trash, Redneck Music That I Hate

Leah Kate: Also Emo Barbie.

Alanis Morissette: Music made for crazy, hate-fueled, psychotic exes who enjoy breaking shit.

Hinder: The worst of the generic radio rock bands. OK, maybe I'm wrong.

Collective Soul: Alanis Morissette in band form.

Fuel: Avril Lavigne if she were an alternative metal band.

Good Charlotte: Poseurs.

Stand Atlantic

OneRepublic

Coldplay

Keane

Cherry Ghost

Avril Lavigne: Emo Barbie. Her music is all just the same generic crap about her being an outcast who doesn't get the guy.

Disturbed: Sounds like Nickelback trying too hard to be a Tool/System of a Down fusion band.

Taylor Swift: Started out as a stereotypical bumpkin. Sold out to the mainstream media. Makes too many breakup/love songs. Did the blandest of bland covers of "September" by Earth, Wind and Fire. Not that they were that good of a band anyway.

Puressence

Black Field

Elbow

Adele: Too sappy and boring. I can at least commend her for being an ally toward the LGBTQ community.

Goo Goo Dolls

Toby Keith (B.I.H.): No comment.

Elle King: We get it, you love Jesus. Also, please shut up about your exes... and you know what else. What are you, a femcel?

Faith Hill

Sheryl Crow

Reba McEntire

Holly Dunn

Mindy McCready (R.I.P.)

The Dixie Chicks: Far-left douchebags whose comments about George W. Bush in 2003 damaged their career. Permanently.

Kid Rock and Uncle Kracker: Far-right douchebags who sent a direct political message about the 2024 election.

Donald Trump: And any music designed to support him.

Barack Obama: Back in the early 2010s, "Barack the Builder", a parody of the Bob the Builder theme, would've gotten on my very last nerve.

Lainey Wilson

Shania Twain

Walker Hayes

Garth Brooks

Eric Church

Red Jumpsuit Apparatus

John Rich: Lonestar's lead singer ended up working with Tom MacDonald.

Luke Combs

The Ataris

Maroon 5

Tom MacDonald: If you like listening to this guy as well as anyone he's worked with, you're automatically a pompous, insensitive asshole.

Ben Shaprio: "Hip-hop isn't music." And then, ironically, he makes a rap song with a loser years later.

Roseanne Barr: After her incident of losing her own show, just when you thought it couldn't get any worse, she went and made a song with Tom MacDonald.

Limp Bizkit: A band led by a white guy who constantly wants to prove how much of a hardcore, edgelord gangster he is.

Rob Thomas: "GEHVE MEH YO HART, MAGGIT REAYLHORLSE FOGHT ABOUEHT"

Red City Radio: Sounds like a bunch of conservative dads got together and tried making the kind of music their kids listen to.

Creed: Every white dude's fav christian rock band. South Park proved how crappy this band really is.

A7X: I remember seeing a YouTube comment on the video for "A Little Slice of Heaven" saying it was gothic when really they're just trying too hard to make something over-the-top and disturbing because "IT'S METAL, BRO."
