

This RP would be taking place in a unique setting where toys are alive.

The Premise: Every night when humans go to sleep, entities called nightmares based on their fears and insecurities attempt to breach into the mind of those who's fears conjure them. The only real thing between these breaching entities and the real world is toys, who have the special ability to perceive and combat these entities with powers unique to each toy. Still however they must, every day continue to keep the secret while preparing to battle these entities. Not every human has the misfortune of getting attacked by their Nightmares.

Looking for any response length really, no preference for literacy level

I would be taking more of a gm role for this so you would play a character or characters exploring this world

Scenarios:

- You are a toy who is owned by a person who is a wellspring [Someone who summons nightmares] and are tasked with defending them at night.
- You are a human who has learned of the nightmare threat through some means or another and are trying to investigate and combat the threat.
- You are a toy who is a mercenary, going around from house to house trying to get basically hired to fight nightmares or other toys
- You are a toy agent for the neighborhood watch, an organization tasked with dealing with nightmares and keeping tabs on toys and preventing the breaking of the veil. (Secret that toys are alive)

If your interested send me a friend request and a dm at SarahPL on discord