Good morning journal. Today I woke up to a very unusual sight. When I woke up, I saw that my belly had swollen considerably overnight. It has swollen out about 6 inches and seems to be filled with a liquid of some kind. I had hoped that the only side effects of my spill would be the color change, but I guess not. If I wasn't a guy, I would definitely be mistaken as pregnant. Breakfast was mostly terrible, just like dinner last night, with one notable exception. On a whim I decided to make some blueberry pancakes, which tasted incredible! I don't know why I liked them so much, but I did.

Over the past three hours, my belly has continued to swell more and more, slowly but surely getting larger. No amount of squeezing, pushing, or poking on it has slowed it down noticeably, although I did leak a bit of a blueberry-tasting liquid out of my mouth after a particularly hard squeeze. I wish I could figure out what's going on with my body, and when will it stop, if at all.

My belly is still swelling more, although I think it isn't the only part of my body getting bigger now. My pants are starting to feel a bit tight on me, particularly around my butt. For lunch, I found myself eating mostly foods and drinks that had blueberries as an ingredient. At the rate this is going, I'm definitely going to need new clothes. As odd as this sounds, this swelling feels kinda nice.

Over the past five hours I've discovered several important things about my situation. First, my butt has definitely gotten bigger, as I found out when the pants I was wearing at the time ripped. I'm wearing sweatpants right now, so hopefully they won't tear. Not only is my butt swelling, but I think that my hips and legs are too. I feel a bit wider, for lack of a better term. More importantly, I finally have a theory on what's going to happen to me. In hindsight, I can't believe it took me this long to realize. I was watching Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, and when I got to the scene where Violet chews the gum, I finally was able to put two and two together. It's highly likely that I'm turning into a big blueberry. If that's the case, then I have several preparations I have to make over these few days while I can still move around freely.
