

It was another beautiful day at Three Toed Ranch. The sun was shining, the dinos were chirping, and all the guests had lots of fun. John was a frequent guest here, always loving to see the amazing dinos there, but once he got to meet his favorite dino, the Mapusaurus Delilah, he decided to volunteer there. The ranch had a program where dedicated visitors would be able to volunteer at the ranch and be able to help care for the dinos there. Not everyone could get into the program, as basically everyone wanted to volunteer, but with John's personality, along with his visit with Delilah, he was accepted into the program with flying colors. He was given some basic training and was about to start his first day when he was called into a sudden meeting by the caretakers. They never explained why, but Delilah's caretaker had to take a sudden holiday and wouldn't return for a week. Since they were too busy with their dinos to also care for her, they asked all the volunteers if they would be willing to be the acting caretaker until their return. Many of the volunteers turned down the offer, as they either felt that it was too much work or that they wouldn't be able to handle it. However, John was ecstatic at the offer and was willing to help. Once they organized who would be willing to care for her, they led the remaining volunteers to a door familiar to John, and they arrived inside Delilah's paddock once more. She was as beautiful as he remembered, and her warm smile as she saw and greeted the volunteers confirmed her kindness. The caretakers then told us that, according to their policies, only one could be chosen, so for this final part of the process, they would have the dino herself choose who would take care of her. At that, she nodded to the caretakers and began to approach. A few volunteers were nervous, one shaking from fright, so she reassured them that she would never hurt them. She continued to look at each of them thoroughly, and when she got to John, she smiled, giving him a friendly lick. At that, she decided he would be her acting caretaker, which excited John, and he hugged her snout, happy to be chosen. Some volunteers were annoyed they weren't picked, but they went with the others to perform their regular duties, leaving the two friends to have fun.

Delilah was overjoyed to have John back in her paddock, nuzzling and licking him the moment the others left, which made her human friend giggle. John knew that the next week will be amazing, as even though the work will be challenging since taking care of a dinosaur will be difficult, John was willing to go through with it for Delilah. After Delilah stopped her affection attack, John got up, wiped some saliva off his face, and asked his dino friend, "So, what should we do first?" Delilah put her claw to her chin, thinking about what fun things they could do first, before running over and behind some trees and coming back with a large thick rope hanging in her jaws. "Hehe, might as well have some fun first." John saw as she shifted the rope to where she had one end of it, letting the other end hang out right in front of him. He looked up at Delilah and back to the rope a few times before nodding at her and grabbing hold of the rope, ready for what came next.

Delilah giggled as she gently tugged on the rope, playfully growling at John as she pretended to pull her hardest. John had little problem pulling the rope towards him, thankful she didn't use much strength, and kept pulling harder and harder. She grinned as her friend was eager to play and increased her strength, being careful that she didn't pull too hard since she didn't want to hurt him. They continued like this for a while, pulling on the rope as hard as they could, but as John's sweat went onto the rope, his grip slipped, and he fell to the ground on his behind. Delilah saw that, tossed the rope to the side, and quickly approached her friend. "Oh my, thank goodness you are alright. Didn't think you would let go suddenly. I'm so sorry." John wasn't even sore from the fall, as the soft grass cushioned him on the way down, and he began to reassure her by putting his hand on her chin. "Hey, hey. Don't worry. It wasn't your fault. I just lost my grip, is all. I had a great time playing with you. Maybe I can try and win the rope from you later." Delilah was surprised by his response, feeling better from the hand by her jaws, and smiled. "Hehe. I'm glad to know that you are alright. Wouldn't want anything to happen to you. Let's take a break for now. I will say, I've had more fun playing with you than any of the other volunteers. Even my caretaker doesn't pull as hard as you did. Hehehe." John smiled at her appreciation and cuddled, relaxing with his favorite dino in the park.

After enjoying their loving cuddle session for a while, they heard a rather large groan coming from the dino's belly. They both knew what it meant and blushed as the thought of John entering her belly crossed their minds. As John was about to say something, Delilah put her claw to her lips and, with a smug face, said, "Uh uh uh, you still have the rest of the day to work, my precious human. No belly time for you yet." John blushed at her comment before giving her snout a hug and replying, "Well then, I guess we should get lunch then." At that, the human stood up and headed out the employee door to find her some food, waving goodbye to Delilah as he went through it. John didn't know how she was supposed to get the food to her, but considering he was hungry, he might as well ask his new coworkers in the employee cafeteria. While waiting in line for some food, John recognized the worker in front of him was one of the caretakers and asked him how he could get some food for Delilah. He told John that the caretakers would take one of the worker ATVs, which would be hooked up to a cart full of food for the dinos, and taken to a bunch of locations where the dinos would eat from. The caretaker noted, however, that since they only have one ATV, they assign each feeding session to one caretaker. He then pointed to a board on the cafeteria wall, saying it was posted there, before ordering his food. John saw the process as very interesting, ensuring the caretakers had their fair share of feeding all the different dinosaurs. As he got his food, he sat down at a table to eat and looked at the schedule, seeing a name he recognized all too well on the schedule, seemingly having just been updated just for him.

As he walked toward the warehouse away from the main park area toward the center of the ranch, he wondered what he would find within. He saw some food hoppers sticking out from the building, thankfully labeled for where the contents they would dispense should be brought to. Once he stepped through the side door, he looked within and found the warehouse was split into two sections. The section with the hoppers had a food preparation area filled with all kinds of meat and... pineapples? The other half was a vehicle bay, filled with ATVs that had carriers attached to them, where they could be filled with the food the dinos of the park would eat. I smiled as I saw them, but I was also nervous as I had never driven anything like them before, but I knew that at least some of the dinos wouldn't mind if I took it slow. Better than crashing from going too fast and taking even longer for them to be fed. He turned the key and slowly drove out of the warehouse, thankful the big door was motion activated. He then ensured to park beside one of the hoppers, where the carrier was right underneath one of them, and pressed the button beside it, letting the meat within fill up the carrier. Fortunately for him, there is an onboard GPS for him to use, filled with preset routes depending on the destination, and once he entered the destination, he set off toward it, ready to deliver food for the dinos.

The drive to and from the paddocks was relatively calm. John would pick up the food, drive it into the paddocks, and drop it off at the designated eating areas. John loved every moment of it, as he was able to meet many of the other dinos, from the playful Acro Conifer to the fruit-loving Sauropod Bailey. Eventually, as John got onto the next route, he saw that it took him to see Delilah again, along with her self-proclaimed sister Erica. As the caretaker arrived at the spot, he waved at the two dinos, and they walked up to him and waved back. Delilah was happy to see her friend back, while Erica got to see who her sister's replacement caretaker was. As he deposited the food onto the platform for the dinos to eat at, Erica had a devilish idea and grinned as she approached the human, though still waving as she had no ill intent. As he walked away from the ATV and towards Delilah to have a chat, Erica walked in front of him, circling him so he couldn't go much of anywhere. "My my, what a tasty looking human. What are you doing in a place like this? A dino might come up and gobble you up." She then opened her maw wide in front of him and snapped it mere inches from his flustered face. "Don't worry, I'll be sure to keep you safe, and, warm..." Before Erica could open her maw teasingly at John again, Delilah walked up to him and gave him a soft lick, nuzzling him in view of her now surprised and annoyed sister. "Oh, come on! Right when I was having some fun." Delilah giggled at seeing her sister's reaction and continued to nuzzle John lovingly. "Hehe, well, he's my caretaker, and if anyone is gobbling him up today, it's me. Don't worry; you have your caretaker to gobble up if you wish. Hehehe." Erica was still annoyed but couldn't help but chuckle at her suggestion. "Hehe, fine. Haven't gobbled him up in a while anyway. But John, if you ever want to hang out with or be my prey, my paddock is always open to you." She then turned around and motioned to Delilah to join her as she ate the meat John brought to them. Delilah giggled before nuzzling John again before joining her sister for lunch. The human just chuckled as they chowed down on their meal before hopping on the ATV and driving off to get food for the others, happy to have the chance to meet Erica.

The rest of the food deliveries went well. John had a smooth ride bringing the food to the remaining Dinos. They loved to meet the new volunteer, and John even got a few licks from Cyrus as thanks. Once the final delivery was done, he parked the ATV back in the warehouse and refueled it for the next caretaker before locking it up and heading back to Delilah. After he arrived and saw her beautiful face again, he ran up to her and hugged her, happy to be back again. She giggled and hugged him back, glad to relax with him as her food digests. They stayed like this for a while until Delilah felt that there was something stuck between her teeth. John noticed her discomfited face, so she asked if she was alright. She looked down at her friend and giggled before lovingly nudging her friend, saying, "Yeah, I'm fine. Just feels like something is stuck in my teeth. Don't worry. It will come out naturally." John understood what she said, but even though she said she would be fine, he was her caretaker, so if he could help, he would. "W-Well, maybe I can help. It's not like I haven't been in your maw before. Maybe I can get it out?" Delilah was a bit surprised at his willingness to help but smiled and gave him a big lick in response. "Thank you, John. I didn't want to ask you on your first day, but I'm happy you want to help. There should be a big brush and tooth cleaning supplies with some of my stuff. It would be great if you could help me with that." John smiled and nodded at his friend and gave her a few more pets before walking over to them. Inside one of the cabinets, he found a rather large toothbrush and a tube of dinosaur toothpaste, which made him chuckle at the sight. He then brought them over to her and put some of the toothpaste on them, along with some water, before taking a deep breath and saying, "Alright, Delilah. Open wide."

Delilah giggled at seeing her friend with her toothbrush and proceeded to lie down on the ground, opening her maw wide in front of her friend, showing her teeth covered in the meat she had eaten earlier. John was blushing at the sight, seeing her maw wide enough for him to enter, the warm air flowing from it, and the soft tongue that was like a red carpet for him to enter. He did his best to shake out of the trance, as not only did he have a job to do, but she was currently digesting her food, so it wouldn't be safe for him anyway. With another deep breath, John stepped forward and guided the large brush into her maw. He first started with the upper teeth, as he knew they would be harder to clean, so he might as well get it done now. Delilah purred throughout the process, liking the feeling of the toothbrush rubbing her sharp teeth and happy that her friend was slow and careful with his cleaning. He had the brush go over every last tooth, ensuring they could show their pearly whiteness again. After cleaning them up, he took a small break to clean the brush and get more toothpaste and saw what looked like a thin bone between two of her teeth. John put the brush down carefully and knelt to look at it before looking up at Delilah and saying, "OK. I'm about to pull it out. I know you wouldn't dare, but make sure your maw stays open as wide as possible, alright?" Delilah looked down at her friend, closed her maw breathily, and nodded, ensuring she was more than ready before reopening it, prepared for it to be taken out.

John nodded, went down, and touched the bone, noticing it was wedged between her teeth. She then patted her friend's snout to reassure her before grabbing the bone and putting one of his feet in her maw for support before tugging it. Delilah felt her friend being able to wedge it loose and kept her maw as open as she could, and after a moment, she felt it finally slip out, along with her friend, who she saw fall on his back with it. After a moment of calm, John started to laugh, finding it funny how it dislodged so suddenly, and Delilah even gave a few chuckles before giving John a well deserved lick. "Thank you, John. I'm happy to see that you are OK. Let's hope we don't have to do that again soon. Hehe." John giggled as well and agreed, giving her a few pets on her chin before standing back up and grabbing the brush again, ready to finish the cleaning and get back to the fun and games they had played before.

The sun started to set after an exciting day. The duo had played and relaxed during their time together, with Delilah also taking time while John was busy with other tasks to perform in her exhibits and just be the silly girl everyone knew and loved. The ranch was about to close, and the dinos were beginning to settle down, ready to relax and sleep after such an exciting day. John was finishing putting the rest of the equipment away and planning to hang out with Delilah a bit longer before heading to his assigned room for some rest. It felt crazy to him that this was just the first day out of the week he'll be taking care of her. Definitely was a good idea to volunteer at this ranch. He walked back to her for the final time today and gave her a big hug before telling her goodnight, but before he could pull away, Delilah grabbed her friend's sleeve to stop him, with a sad look in her eyes as she didn't want him to leave yet. John tried to fight it, but one look at them was enough for John to not resist her. "Alright, you win. I'll stay with you tonight." Instantly her eyes lit up, and she licked him insistently, which caused her caretaker to fall to the ground giggling at it all.

After some cuddles and nuzzles as they watched the sunset, they both grew tired, the long day finally taking its toll on them, and John lay on Delilah's side to rest. However, Delilah had other plans, and she cooed at her human friend and opened her maw wide to him. John blushed again, the familiar view of her maw comforting him, and he nodded, already knowing what she wanted. She grinned as her friend crawled into her open maw, her getting to taste her sweet friend once more, and she held him in her maw for a bit, happy to get the chance to hold him again. John enjoyed it as well, as her maw was more comfortable than any bed he's ever been on, and when he felt her head rise up to gulp him down, he smiled and relaxed as he slid down her throat and into her belly. She purred as she felt her friend arrive in her belly, and she nudged the bulge he made lovingly. "Hehe, thank you for staying with me, John. Now get some rest. We'll have an amazing time together in the morning." John giggled and rubbed the belly walls some more before laying down in the comfy belly and letting himself sleep. It still felt like a dream that he became her caretaker, if even for a week, and as he slept, he dreamed of the amazing times they'll have together. Delilah smiled as she heard the little snores from within her belly, and she licked her belly before laying her head next to it and closing her eyes, happy to have her friend with her for the days to come.