

Kailrun, who has been working hard since he was young. The people had to write down what active work they did today. Infants and students had to study. Adults had to have a job, continue simple labor, or try to find a job. The elderly had to do government-sponsored chores or do one hobby unconditionally. Such efforts had to be recorded in photos or videos. If these records were omitted even for a day, the person was immediately taken to a detention center and executed. Kailrun explained that those who do not try are not worth existing in the world.

Kailrun was interested in the punishment of criminals, so he participated directly. Strong punishment for criminals was also the best way to bring society to its senses. Kailrun executed the death penalty himself without a day off.

"How many people are on death row today?"

"There are 200 people."

"What's your crime?"

"There are 60 people for luxury, 60 for vanity, 50 for laziness, and 30 for a felony."

"There are still a lot of people who can't get their head around it. All right, I've thought of 200 ways to kill people with my body, which is an opportunity to practice."

Kailrun whistles and prepares to hit those who will be executed. Those who will be executed sweat with their backs at the eerie whistle.

"Save me!"

Some cry in despair, and some give up as if they had given up everything.

"So why did you do something wrong?"

With Kailrun's cold words, the death penalty people lose all hope for an extension of their lives. They wait for their death without saying anything. Kailrun coolly relieves the stress he had. For Kailrun, the death penalty was too weak a sandbag. Even with a slight touch, their bodies often burst with a huge rupture. The place where the death penalty was executed smelled fishy blood that could not be erased, making the general public sick. Traces of Kailrun's assault remained intact in the pile of bodies piled up on the execution site. The bodies that had become mummies without rot due to low temperatures were incinerated every time they filled a thousand.

"Ah, why are people so weak? They can't stand my fist even once."

It was Kailrun who had no idea whether he became stronger. Some strong criminals used to withstand Kailrun's attacks one to two times. Of course, it is natural to bleed from the body, and in serious cases, part of the body part used to disappear.

"It's amazing that you survived my attack". I'll save you."

It is Kailrun, who reduces the death row to life imprisonment if he holds out his attack at least once. However, there were many cases of becoming disabled almost unconditionally because of Kailrun's attack. Most of the prisoners continued their lives worse than death.

"I'm so happy to kill bugs that are useless to society".

After Kailrun took power, Kailrun's company monopolized all the money-making businesses. Those who were not hired by his company had better give up their dream of making money and raising a family. If you don't work for a company in Kailrun, you often had to be kicked out of the area of the general public without enduring the murderous prices of rich neighborhoods. Some people who were kicked out were pessimistic about their situation and often committed suicide.

"What? You commit suicide because you can't live in a rich neighborhood anymore?" If there's a rumor like that, the atmosphere will be ugly, so take care of it roughly and finish it."

Kailrun used power to hide all events that could undermine his reputation. For people, Kailrun has always had to be a perfect leader. Kailrun blocked people's eyes and ears and controlled their thoughts. In a manipulated society, people always had to feel happy. That's because people can survive another day.

Entering Kailrun's company has become the ultimate dream of all young people. For the general public, it was simple to enter Kailrun's company. They proved that I was better than others, so they only had to enter the starting lineup for the Kailrun company. It was natural for Kailrun's company employees to receive twice to ten times more money than ordinary people.

"How hard did I have to get into this company?"

In addition, private houses were provided free of charge to those entering Kailrun's company. It was an exceptional benefit to provide that real estate in a rich neighborhood had murderous rent or murderous house sales prices. Even if people saved a little money, they could buy a house in a rich neighborhood for their families or themselves. In addition, the company supported about a month's vacation a year so that they could not notice their bosses or colleagues. And people could apply for expenses if they wanted to learn something or go on a trip. All of them were approved as long as they properly explained what it meant to them. Kailrun's company had the company's conditions that everyone wanted, such as a lot of money, work-life balance, and learning opportunities.

"Everyone, become Kailrun's people!"

These phrases were so popular among young people. Kailrun's security company became popular among people with excellent physical education talents or superpowers. Kailrun reorganized his
