

New Playmate

The sun rose, filling Felix's room; he sat up with a grimace and a subtle squish. Felix let out a sigh, "Again?" He thought to himself as he removed his covers to expose his soden pull-up. He sighed and got out of bed. This was already a rough start to what would be an awful day, at least in his mind. Since the accident, he was regressed to a toddler, no older than a kindergartner. Due to this, he was forced to reenroll into kindergarten, much to Felix's disdain.

As Felix got him, his partner, now caretaker, Inky, came in to help him prepare for the school day ahead. "Good morning, little one! How did you sleep?" Inky asked as he started to pick out an outfit for the young tot. "I guess, alright, do I really have to do this?" Felix asked with a slight huff as he began to change his pull-up. Changing himself was the one thing Felix fought tooth and nail on; he'd die of embarrassment if Inky were to change him. "Sorry, but you have to. At least try and make the most of it. I hear there's another regresse in the class, so at least you aren't alone!" Inky chimed as he pulled out a small blue shirt with a pair of shortalls.

Felix sighed, "Ugh... I suppose I'll try, but just until we find a cure for this!" Felix huffed as he let Inky start to dress him. Inky chuckled, "Haha, that works for me now, come on before you're late!" Inky chimed as he went downstairs. The pair quickly ate, and Felix was then whisked off to school. As they pulled into the parking lot, Felix couldn't help but blush, "God, this is just so embarrassing..." He sighed to himself as they parked the car.

Once inside, Inky held Felix's hand as he led him to his class. Many other students were bussing around, playing, and just being kids. Felix silently groaned to himself. He couldn't believe he was now on the same level as these toddlers. As he stood in the large, colorful classroom, the young cheetah teacher, Ms.Smith, approached Inky, "Oh, who's this little one?" She cooed as she looked down at Felix. Inky smiled, "This is Felix. He's new to your class. Come on, Felix, say hi!" He cooed, making Felix blush. Felix sighed and simply waved.

Ms.Smith smiled, "Hehe, I promise he'll be in good paws here. Say bye to Daddy!" She cooed to a blushing Felix. Felix simply sighed before waving goodbye to Inky as Inky chuckled and left. Ms.Smith turned to the class and tapped a young blue skunk on the shoulder, "Hey Gus, can you be the teacher's helper today and show our new student Felix around?" She asked with a smile. Gus turned around, a slight crinkle under his tush. "Hm? Hehe, okay, Ms.Smith!" He chimed with a smile. He had started to like kindergarten, though he would never let Annie, his housemate and mommy, know this fact.

Gus happily toddled up to Felix, sticking out his paw, "Hehe hi! I'm Gus! What's your name?" He chimed with a smile. Felix raised an eyebrow. This was clearly a child, but kids don't stick out their paw for a paw shake. "U-Uh.. it's Felix..." Felix stammered, awkwardly shaking Gus' paw. "Nice to meet you, Felix, wanna come play with some toys?" Gus asked, jumping straight to the point. Felix stammered, "I-I guess..." Gus raised an eyebrow, "Hm? Why aren't you excited to play with toys?" Gus asked before it finally clicked, "Oh! Are you actually an adult like me?" Felix blushed, "W-What? How'd you guess?" Felix stammered in shock.

Gus shrugged, "You just don't really act like a kid, ya know?" Gus explained. Felix sighed, "Well, yeah, I'm supposed to be an adult after all, but why do you act like a kid?" Felix asked curiously. Gus blushed slightly, "W-Well... It is kinda fun... and really relaxing..." Gus admitted. "F-fun? How could any of this be fun?" Felix stammered. Gus blushed but then brightened as he got an idea, "Well, why don't you hang out with me and find out!" Gus chimed.

Felix blushed, but he could at least relate to Gus, both being former adults. "F-Fine... just don't expect me to play with any dolls, okay?" Felix huffed. Gus giggled, "Why don't we play during recess then? I like playing outside more than playing inside!" He chimed. Felix sighed, "I-I guess that's better than playing inside," He stated, his face still red with blush. "Yeah! But we gotta wait till lunch, so what do you like to do?" Gus asked, trying to learn more about his friend.

Felix blushed, "W-well, I guess I do like video games. What about you?" Felix asked. Gus smiled wide, "Hehe, I like video games too!" He chimed eagerly. Felix smiled a bit. He didn't get the chance to talk to people who liked video games like he did! "O-Oh, really? Hehe, that's so cool!" Felix chimed, smiling. Gus nodded eagerly, "Hehe yeah! They're the best!" Gus said with a happy smile. The pair sat and talked about their interests, the games they like to play, back when a controller could fit in their paws, and their other interests and hobbies.

Soon, it was time for lunch. Gus was picked as line leader, with Felix right behind him. "Single file, everyone. Come on, let's fill those bellies!" Ms. Smith chimed as Gus happily marched to the cafeteria. Felix groaned; he couldn't help but feel this was just annoyingly embarrassing. Soon, they made it to the cafeteria, and Felix was at least thankful for that, as he was starving! "Hehe, for a school, the food here is actually really good!" Gus chimed as he and Felix went through the line.

"I-Is it really? When I was a kid, well... the first time I was a kid, the food was really gross!" Felix explained. "Well, the food here is really yummy! Trust me!" Gus chimed as he was handed a tray of dinosaur-shaped nuggets with a small side of apple slices plus a juice box! "Hehe, yay! Nuggies!" Gus chimed with a smile as he went and sat down, starting to eat his food. Felix frowned but followed Gus and sat down, "Nuggets... really?" He said with a look of disappointment. "Oh, come on! At least try them!" Gus urged with a smile.

Felix sighed but decided to eat; he was starving, after all. As he began to eat, he quickly found himself really liking the nuggets and fries! Even the juice box was delicious! "Mmm, this is really good!" Felix chimed in shock as he finished his tray. Gus snickered, "Hehe, I told you!" He said with a smile. As the two joked and talked, Ms. Smith called for recess, leading her class to the playground. A more accurate explanation would be the kindergarten's playground, as the bigger kids got bigger slides plus a larger jungle gym. Though, the kindergarteners were content with what they had.

"W-Whoa... this place is actually kinda big...!" Felix said in a bit of shock as he looked around, though that was really his much smaller size playing tricks on him. "Hehe, yep, tag!" Gus chimed, placing his paw on Felix's back before waddle running away with a series of giggles. "W-Wha? G-Get back here, you meanie!" Felix yelled as he gave chase. Gus was much more acquainted with the playground, weaving through the other kids, using slides for speed boosts, and knowing the best hiding spots to lose Felix!

The chase lasted for most of recess until Gus hid under a slide; having evaded Felix for most of recess, he chose to take a breath under the slide. "Huff... huff... Hehe, I can't believe I kept him it all recess!" Gus giggled to himself before realizing that he didn't see Felix anywhere. Soon, he could spot Felix on the other side of the playground, doing some weird... dance? As Gus approached him, he saw Felix hopping on his paws back and forth with one paw pressed down against his crotch. "Hm? Felix, what are you doing?" Gus asked, though his sudden appearance made Felix scared, and he lost his concentration.

As Felix turned around, his face a bright red, a subtle hissing sound could be heard. "O-Oh..." Gus said, his face reddened with embarrassment as he realized what Felix had just done. Felix was a blushing mess, and he sniffled a bit, tears close to falling from his eyes. "I-It's okay, Felix! Trust me, I have accidents all the time!" Gus reassured, lowering his shorts to show Felix that he, too, was wet. Felix sniffled, feeling a bit comforted about the fact he wasn't alone. "Now come on, let's tell Ms. Smith we need a change!" Gus chimed.

Felix nodded and walked over before tapping GUs, "Hehe, you're it now!" He chimed with a giggle before dashing away! "W-What! Oh, come on! I thought the game was over!" Gus said with a giggle as he chased Felix back to Ms. Smith. Once at Ms. Smith, though, Felix grew cold feet, so Gus had to be a brave skunk and step up. "H-hey Ms. Smith... me and Felix need a change..." he said with a blush, Felix blushing just as hard.

Ms. Smith smiled warmly, "Of course, good job being a good boy and asking Gus; we can try the potty later. We gotta get inside, change you two cuties, and put you two down for a nap!" She cooed, bopping Gus' nose, making him blush and giggle. The two were led inside, along with the rest of the class. Gus was brought up to the changing table first. His sodden pull-up was removed and replaced with a diaper, "Just in case you have another accident during nap time!" She cooed before laying him down.

Felix was up next, and while he squirmed a bit, Ms. Smith expertly got him changed into a pristine white diaper. Felix was blushing heavily as he was laid down next to Gus. “Hehe, did you have a good day?” Gus asked with a grin. Felix blushed and nodded a bit, “I-I guess I had a good day... t-thanks Gus...” Felix said a bit bashfully. Gus smiled, “Hehe, of course!” He chimed before yawning, “nigh night...” He babbled before drifting off to sleep. Felix yawned and soon drifted off to sleep, happy with his new life in Kindergarten!