

This story involves my original character, Shelby. For a quick backstory, in an RP event from way, way back in the day she became immortal however his particular story is definitely ridiculous and non-canon.

Thursday Prompt: Supplement

Story: The Cat and the Meme

“So, you’re saying that kids keep randomly vanishing from Camp Anawanna, but you have no idea why?” The feline blinked with a confused expression on her face, tilting her head at the head camp counselor standing before her.

Shelby had taken a job as a part time forest ranger to supplement her income while in between jobs, but she had been told that the job itself should be boring and uneventful with the exception of possible forest fires. This however was no fire, as the panicked human male before her was indicating.

“Yeah, I have no idea what was happening but the kids just kept vanishing. It seemed like every time I took my eyes off of them another would suddenly be gone. Look lady, you gotta help me, I can’t just lose a whole campground of kids!” the frantic human said as he flailed his arms and pointed back in the direction he had come from.

Reaching up to scratch at her nose, the feline blinked a few times while ears flicked about before letting out a sigh and shaking her head. “Alright I guess I’ll go back with you and check it out. Was anything happening before the kids vanished? Did you notice anything... unusual?” Turning down the trail that went back to the camp.

“Well...” He said while following behind her. “The kids were acting strange but that isn’t too unusual at this camp. I’m not really sure what was going on but they were all running around yelling and screaming. Acting real fools to be honest. Kept saying someone named CandleJack was going to get them? Then they’d yell and say not to say his name, but they kept saying it anyway. Honestly I just thought it was one of their stupid games.”

Stopping to blink at the man, Shelby raised an eyebrow and folded her ears back. “What? And they all vanished after that?”

The man shrugged, making a stupid and confused face as he did so. The feline then turned around, taking a few steps forward before her ears perked and caused her to look back to find the man missing. “What the hell...? Okay I’m not saying CandleJa...”